BETROOT NEGRONI

- Classic Reinterpreted -

Appetizer

Bitter

London Dry Gin, red vermouth, pickled beetroot, gentian extract and orange twist

The Negroni, a cocktail of Italian origin, is one of the most famous drinks in the world. It has been invented in 1919 by Count Camillo Negroni, at café Casoni in Florence, where, jointly with the barman Fosco Scarselli, decided add gin to the traditional Italian amaro.

We propose our version, replacing the classic bitter with pickled beetroot and gentian extract.

Sweet

Bitter

Creamy

Fruity

Vodka infused with coffee, tiramisu mix, passion fruit gelatin and coffee “air”.

The Espresso Martini was created by Dick Bradsell in 1984, at that time a bartender at Soho Brasserie (London). The story goes that a top model (the legends suggest that it was Naomi Campbell) came to the bar to ask for a drink, which managed to wake her up. We reverse this classic with one of our favorite desserts: tiramisu.

DRY LAW

The Dry Law also called prohibition, is ban on the production, transportation and sale of alcoholic beverages.

The most important one was the Eighteenth amendment of the United States Constitution, together with the Volstead Act.

This ban gave rise to organized crime in the US. With the prohibition thousands of clandestine bars emerged with the purpose of selling alcohol. These premises were camouflaged behind business facades, hair salons, florists, butchers, etc. In order to access the shop, customers needed a contact and a password.

The Dry Law came into force in 1919 and lasted until 1933.

We propose one renewed classic cocktail, created in the age of pre-prohibition and prohibition. Please ask the bartender for its vision.
